Nazli Morel (UConn '19, NSU-KPCOM '23) is a second-year osteopathic medical student at the Nova Southeastern University College of Osteopathic Medicine (NSU-KPCOM). She graduated from UConn with a degree in Molecular and Cell Biology in 2019. While at UConn, Nazli was involved in research at UConn Health, the translational research program at CCMC, and the Collegiate Health Service Corps. After graduation, Nazli matriculated to medical school where she runs the Pediatrics Interest Group on campus and is a mentor to first-year medical students. Nazli enjoys walking the beautiful Florida beaches on her days off. She hopes to pursue a speciality in pediatrics and will begin her clinical rotations in June 2021.

Shana Morel (UConn '19, UNECOM '24) is a first-year osteopathic medical student at The University of New England College of Osteopathic Medicine (UNECOM). She graduated from UConn's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences with a degree in Molecular and Cell Biology in 2019. During her undergraduate studies, Shana performed research in UConn's Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences Division of Medicinal Chemistry. She was involved in the Undergraduate Research Association Program. She held leadership positions in Partners in Health Engage, Iranian Student Association, and the Public Health House LC. She also served in the Collegiate Health Service Corps. Shana took a growth year between college and medical school during which she served as an AmeriCorps member under the program Service to Improve Community Health and held a position as a data analyst at a federally qualified health center.
